

Kallista Musselman is a senior at the University of Vermont's Rubenstein School of Environment and Natural Resources, studying Environmental Science, and is one of this year's Field Biology Summer Interns. Kallista's originally from Columbus, Ohio, and loves to spend her free time outside by hiking, skiing, or finding a body of water to read by! At UVM, she's also an active member of the Equestrian Team, where she proudly serves as captain. This summer, she looks forward to gaining hands-on experience in ecological research and contributing to meaningful mosquito control efforts in the Otter Creek Watershed.
